Focus on: MAF-101 - Masonry and Flooring Course

By Neil Cuomo

The MAF-101 course (Introduction to Masonry and Flooring) is one of the six courses taken by our students for the Building Maintenance Workers Certificate Training program. This session of the course began on 4/30/2012, and will end on 5/22/2012. The MAF-101 Course has many components from Floor Design and Planning to the actual building of concrete forms and foundations, laying floor and wall tile, building brick walls, laying VCT and Laminate flooring, constructing block retaining walls, and laying concrete pavers. Students will learn the basics in flooring from site preparation to ordering, and eventually installing MAF materials. We have many different types of tile and block saws for the students to use as well as concrete mixers, floats and edgers. This course has a 70:30 ratio of hands-on training to lecture, which means that our students will be spending a lot of time building projects.

Blood Drive
5/09/12

Donating blood is literally giving the gift of life. Each day, patients in our region need close to 2,000 people to roll up their sleeves and donate. There is simply no substitute for voluntarily donated blood. Without it, our community would not have an adequate supply. Our next blood drive is on 5/09/12, from 10:00am to 3:00pm at our school location. All are welcome. Walk-ins are welcome, but registration is preferred. Please call (718) 392-4156, or send an email to Millie@qbitti.com on or before 5/8/12 to donate.

Placement Highlights

By Bill Higgins

Recently five of our Building Maintenance graduates participated in an open house with a Maintenance Company based here in Long Island City where as a result of their training, subsequent interviews were immediately held. We hope that job offers are forthcoming. Additionally, we welcomed the Operations Manager of a thriving Manhattan Telecom Firm for a site tour. We're confident that our Telecom Tech graduates will benefit from this visit in the very near future. As always, we want to congratulate the following graduates on their recent hiring: Copier Tech graduate Jeff L. (25), Plumber's Helper graduates Jacob P. (18) & Anthony S. (36) and Building Maintainer's graduate Donta J. (38).
